A NEW TYPE OF JEWISH MARANOS

The absence and practice of Jewish religious rites and ceremonies by Jewish members of the Communist party in Russia is regarded as a transgression for which they may be excluded from the privileged classes to whom bread and safety are secured and prison exile may be imposed according to a decision of the Regional Committee of the Communist Party in Homel.

The tribunal lately considered the appeal of the Jewish Communist, Lew, who was excluded from the Communist Party on the accusation that, though he participated in the anti-religious campaign during the Passover holiday last year, he provided himself, his family and his parents with matzohs and gave a seder. When asked for an explanation, Lew declared that he obtained matzohs for his household not because of religious convictions, but because he thought bread would be dangerous food for his wife who was pregnant. The Regional Committee of the Communist party rejected Lew's appeal, which means that he and his family will now suffer hunger and privation.

Other Jewish Communists have been similarly accused by spies in the employ of the Department for Jewish Affairs in Communist Russia known as the Jevseksia and made to suffer because they married according to chupah-u-kedushin or circumcised their male children or had their children taught Hebrew.

It is one of the ironies of history that thousands of Jews who have joined the Communist Party because it means bread and shelter and security, must lead a dual existence, denouncing and combating Judaism as a matter of public policy whilst practising Judaism and observing Jewish rites in secret. It is a reversion to the Marano life of our brethren in Spain under the tyranny of the Catholic Church's Inquisition. It seems that tyranny is tyranny whether it be in the fourteenth century or in the twentieth century, whether in Spain or in Russia—whether the inquisitors be Catholics or Communists—the Jew suffers the same indignities under tyranny and reverts to the same methods and risks of observing his national and religious customs and habits of life. The Jewish Communists in Russia are twentieth century editions of the Maranos.

But all Jews can not become Communists for the sake of bread and security, and those who refuse to join the Communist ranks suffer the tortures worse than those of the Spanish Inquisition. The economic basis of life has been destroyed for the four million Jews of Soviet Russia and their future is a pitiful one.

Lately the Jewish section of the Communist Party has become extremely active in its endeavour to destroy and root out all vestiges of Jewish religious and nationalistic—especially Zionist—activities in Russia. It is forbidden to teach Judaism or Hebrew to Jewish children, excepting under the most limited conditions to a select few who are to be trained as Jewish clericals. All the Jewish teaching that goes on is done surreptitiously, behind closed doors and in secret hiding places. Zionists are hounded, arrested and sent into exile as counter-revolutionists, and many are executed.

Recently the head of the Jewish sections of the Communist Party, M. Merejin, published an order calling upon the Jewish workers to turn definitely away from the Jewish faith and urging them to terrorize the Jewish clericals. He says: "The only observers of the Jewish religion in Russia still left are Jewish shopkeepers and the speculators—the Jewish clericals and the bourgeoisie. Our task is to tear the masks from them and to expose them as the speculators they are."

He forbade the central Jewish Labor Co-operatives from selling kosher meat on the days preceding the last High Holy days, because it was pandering to foolish religious superstitions. During these sacred days in the Jewish calendar, anti-religious meetings were arranged and the Jewish festivals and religion denounced by agitators, and Jews working in Communistic factories were threatened with discharge and prosecution if they failed to report to work on Yom Kippur.

In Odessa the main synagogue was confiscated (closed) by the Communists ostensibly for political reasons—reasons which cover a multiple of sins—and then opened as a Communist Youths' Club.

The Zionists, according to The Emes, which is the official Yiddish organ of the Jewish Communists, are accused of establishing contacts with the bourgeoisie abroad to influence the English elections in favour of the Conservative Zionist lords and bankers, Rothschild and Samuel, as well as to prevent the recognition of Soviet Russia by France. The paper urges the government to compel the Zionists to turn over the funds of the Jewish Colonial Trust, Jewish National Fund and the Keren Hayesod for the purpose of carrying on colonization work in Soviet Russia.

These are the conditions under which Jewish life must be lived in fanatic, Communistic, tyrannous Russia. It was bad enough for Jews under the Czarist regime—but is it not worse under the iron heel of proletariatism? Yet we know that when Communism suffers defeat in Russia, and a change occurs, it will be the signal for the red sluices to open and Jewish blood will dye the rivers and streams of Russia. In Russia the Jews are "between the devil and the deep blue sea."

MARRIAGES

Knight—Fine

The marriage of Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Fine, to Israel Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Knight, was solemnized in the Bnai Jacob Synagogue on November 11, at 7 o'clock, Rabbi Becker officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette, brocaded with white chenille. Her veil of silk net was embroidered and arranged in cap effect with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of ophelia roses with shower of lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by Miss Anna Fine, as maid of honour, in coral georgette, brocaded in silver chenille, and by four bridesmaids: Misses Fay Marcus, in peach georgette, beaded; Ray Knight, in lemon satin and georgette; Rose Adelman, in rainbow georgette with flower trimming and rhinestones; and Anna Goldstein, in beige beaded georgette. All the attendants carried bouquets of roses and carnations. The best man was H. I. Kastner, and the ushers were: Moe Perlman, H. Block, Saul Marcus, and Joe Fine. The mother of the bride wore black beaded georgette with corsage of American beauties, and the mother of the groom black crepe back satin with corsage of roses. Blossom Fine, the flower girl, wore a ruffled frock of salmon georgette and carried a basket of flowers. Neville Fine, the page, wore a suit of black velvet with blouse of white satin. The out-of-town guests included O. Nacht, of Newark; J. Nacht, of New York; Joe Fine and Miss Rose Adelman, of Toronto; Louis David, of Buffalo; Harry Dworkin, of New York; Mrs. A. Raphael, of Thetford Mines; Miss S. Rosenberg, of Ottawa, and Mr. and Mrs. Gruvich, of Ottawa. Dinner was served to 250 guests. "Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

Despite the dark hints dropped to President Coolidge that he had better declare himself on the Ku Klux Klan question, nothing terrible happened to him except that he was elected President of the United States. The Klan issue was an important one, especially to Jews, and many of our leaders and writers awaited presidential condemnation of the Klan in vain, to their apparent pain and surprise. They got what they deserved for expecting what they did.

While he was vice-president under Harding, Coolidge was generally supposed to be so dumb that he couldn't speak on any subject with authority. When he became president, this impression was erased by nothing more than the mere fact that he was now the first gentleman of the country. Coolidge was the same reactionary yokel, but whereas he had been dumb before, he was only being silent now and passing for a philosopher. He accomplished things just the same, for one of which he remained quite modest during pre-election days. That achievement was his part in the passage of the immigration bill, which as the republican organ, the "New York Tribune" said, hits "Jews and Italians."

Coolidge was all for this discriminatory measure, the darling of the Ku Klux Klan and others of Anglo-Saxon Protestant supremacy madness. Republicans in Congress who struggled for the passage of the immigration bill under the approval of the President were known as the "American bloc," while the enemies of the bill were called the "alien bloc." Thus, hand in glove as he was with the Klan in their aim to protect America from undesirable immigration, how or why should he be rash enough to denounce his friends? Only a foolishly optimistic Jew or Catholic could expect it.

There died recently in Minneapolis the Yiddish daily newspaper, "The Saturday Post," and although there is not much love lost on the whole between English Jewish papers and the Yiddish papers, this lack of affection seldom illicits such an avowal of ill-will and bias as the post-mortem over the "Post" produced from the "American Israelite."

On the demise of the "Post" the "Israelite" quotes from the "American Jewish World," a Minneapolis contemporary as follows:

"The reason is not far to seek. Those who read Yiddish exclusively have the greatest metropolitan Yiddish daily to fall back on, with a wealth of material with which no local periodical, especially a weekly, can hope to compete. Also, more and more Yiddish-speaking parents realize the need of an organ that will interpret the Jew and Judaism to their children. The old may enjoy Yiddish, but whether we like it or not, that language is unknown to the young, and to them literature in Yiddish is indeed a closed book. Only an English-Jewish periodical will serve their purpose."

To this the anxious "Israelite" adds of its own:

"This is a verdict in which all of us will concur, and many go a step further and say if all the Yiddish papers in the country were to go out of existence to-morrow, it would be an excellent thing for American Jewry at large."

It is hard to agree with the "World" entirely. Just because the young people may not read or desire Yiddish is no reason why their elders or others who do not read English with ease should be denied the pleasure and value they undoubtedly receive from Yiddish publications. But it is very easy to score the "Israelite" roundly for any such nonsensical notion as that American Jewry would benefit from the abolishment of Yiddish papers. As long as there are people in America whose mother tongue is Yiddish, there will be a place for Yiddish newspapers, even poor ones, and a need for them just as distinct as that which gives the "American Israelite," the sycophant of the American rabbinate, its lease on life.

SEFARDIC JEWS TO HOLD WORLD CONGRESS

The Sefardic communities in various parts of the world will soon be called upon to send representatives to a congress in order to organize the Sefardim to take a larger part in national Jewish activities. The impetus to that movement was given recently by Mr. Ussischkin, who has traveled through the Balkan States, and came in contact with a number of Sefardic Jewish communities. A more potent stimulus was given the idea by the visit of Dr. Ariel Bension to Shanghai, and the journal issued there, Israel's Messenger, came out with a leading editorial urging the calling of such a congress with a view of giving the Sefardic Jews a representation in the councils of the Zionist organization.

A committee of the World Congress of Sefardim was organized in Jerusalem and already had some sessions and presented a memorandum to Colonel Kisch of the Palestine Zionist Executive. The Sefardic representatives in attendance were Dr. I. Levy, vice-chairman of the Jerusalem municipality; Joseph Meyuchas, chairman of the Vaad Hair, A. Elmaleh, editor of the Dour Hayom, and Isaac Elyashar. In the course of the conference, it was asserted that the Sefardim wished to play a greater part in Zionist affairs, and that the Congress which it is proposed shall be held a month previous to the next Zionist Congress, should aim to make this possible.

TALMUD TORAH BOARD RE-ELECTS CASPAR CAPLAN

At the annual election of officers of the Ottawa Talmud Torah Board, Caspar Caplan was re-elected president of the Board by acclamation. Other officers also re-elected by acclamation were: Vice-presidents, S. Spevak and M. Lachovitz; secretary, Mr. Benjamin Fox; treasurer, Mr. A. Shaffer; chairman of finance committee, Mr. M. Loeb; chairman of building committee, A. Levinson. The only election to take place was for the chairmanship of the education committee, to which office J. J. Marks was elected. Owing to the construction of the hall a new office, chairman of the hall committee, had to be created, and S. Kronick was elected by acclamation to fill it. A. J. Freiman and A. L. Florence were also elected honorary presidents, and J. R. Fogie and M. Held were elected honorary members of the executive. The chairman of the board appointed the following members to the education committee: A. Levinson, I. Rosenthal, B. Goldfield, K. Cohen, M. Doctor, M. Palmer, M. Lachovitz and I. Nadler. The following members, as chosen by the various synagogues, composed the 1924-25 board: Representatives of the King Edward Avenue Synagogue, C. Caplan, B. G. Goldfield, L. S. Greenberg, N. Metrick, A. Levinson, J. Richter, J. Golub, B. Fox, I. Rosenthal, J. J. Marks; representatives of the Rideau Street Synagogue, S. Spevak, A. Shaffer, M. Loeb, S. Kronick, M. Palmer, K. Cohen, H. Finkelstein, M. Doctor, A. Betcherman, A. Sugarman; representatives of the Murray Street Synagogue, M. Lachovitz, I. Nadler, K. Appie, M. Adelstein and M. Drazin. M. Frank, the principal, was present and gave his first report, which showed that there is now a registration of 206 pupils, a net increase of fifty-three since he assumed his office a month ago. Mr. Frank reported that since the arrival on November 1 of Miss B. Riegler, the new teacher for the lower grades, the new system of direct teaching had been given a fair start.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Kizell entertained at a reception last Sunday evening in honour of their son, Robert, whose barmitsvah took place on Saturday, November 8, at the King Edward Avenue Synagogue. Rabbi M. J. Mintz conducted the services. Mr. and Mrs. Kizell were assisted in receiving by Robert and Mrs. A. Dworkin. An orchestra played. The supper table in the dining room was presided over by Mrs. A. Kizell, Mrs. H. Berman and Mrs. A. J. Herman. Ices were cut by Mrs. J. B. Dover, Mrs. A. Dover and Mrs. M. Kizell. Assisting were Misses Thelma Dover, Anne Freedman, Sylvia Dover, Blanche Millar and Ray Dover. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. Dover, of Cornwall; Mr. and Mrs. J. Herman, of Rutherglen; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dover, Shawville; Mr. and Mrs. H. Berman, of Golden Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Kizell, of Killaloe; Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Bushanbaum, and Messrs. H. Hackoff and L. Bass, of Montreal; Miss Anne Finster, of Toronto, and Miss Rose Silverman, of Sudbury.

FEIN—SMITH

The wedding was solemnized, November 4, at the Racquet Court, of Miss Essie Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Smith, and Isadore Carl Fein, of Morgantown, West Virginia, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fein, of Lynchburg. Rev. J. D. Mirsky and Rabbi M. J. Mintz officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white silk crepe romain beaded in silver and crystal. Her veil, arranged in cap shape, was caught with orange blossoms, andshe carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Minerva Smith, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, was maid of honour, in a Spanish costume in shawl effect of white flat crepe, banded in deep white fringe and embroidered in red poppy design. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses. Florence Fine, of Montreal, was flower girl, in pink georgette with ruffled skirt. She carried a basket of Columbia roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Fanny Smith, sister of the bride, and Miss Rae Fine, of Minneapolis, cousin of the bride, wore gowns of similar design, powder blue and orchid colours, beaded in crystal. Silver bandeaux were worn and they carried bouquets of Columbia roses. Joe Fein, of Roanoke, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Kalman Smith and Julius Smith, brothers of the bride. Mrs. Smith, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black sequins and corsage of roses. Mrs. Fein, mother of the groom, wore a dress of black lace and corsage of roses. Following the ceremony and dinner, a reception and dance was held. Mr. and Mrs. Fein left for New York and Washington before going to Morgantown, where they will live. Going away, the bride wore a dress of black bengaline cloth with French applique designs in coloured kid; a small French hat of black, embroidered in autumn shades, and a black lamb jacquette. Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. A. Fein, Mr. A. Feinman, Joe Feinman and Meyer Cohen, of Lynchburg, Va.; Joe Fein, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. M. Fine, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Fine, Ben Cohen and Lawrence Glickman, of Montreal; N. Smith and Miss Minerva Smith, of Toronto, and Miss Rae Fine, of Minneapolis.

REVIEW JUNIOR SECTION

All contributions for the Junior Section must be sent to CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, 319 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario. Any girl or boy is welcome to join our section and to contribute poems, essays, stories, riddles, etc. Just fill out this little card and mail it at once.

REVIEW JUNIOR SECTION:

I would like to join the Cousin Family of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

My name is.....

I live at.....

I am..... years of age.

Come one! Come all! Let's have lots and lots and lots of new cousins. Ye Maker of Limericks says he'll write a limerick especially for every new cousin. And though I say it as shouldn't, Ye Maker of Limericks certainly can write pomes! (You'll note I said "pomes" and not "poems"—there is a difference!)

We have decided to make this a "different" competition . . . . and to let you choose your own subject. There will be prizes for the best entries. There are absolutely no rules, except the usual ones that are observed in writing to us. You may write a story, an essay, a poem a comedy, a tragedy (I almost said, a melodrama!), a play, a thesis —what you will—and each will be judged on its own merits, with prizes for the best. So, cousins mine, you have carte blanche; choose your own subject and your own medium for expression and mail us the result AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. Everybody welcome.

Cousin David.

Dear Cousins:

I found this sweet little poem of Edna St. Vincent Millay's for you . . . .

Afternoon on a Hill.

I will be the gladdest thing,
Under the sun.
I will touch a hundred flowers
And not pick one.

I will look at cliffs and clouds
With quiet eyes.
Watch the wind blow down the grass
And the grass rise.

And when the lights begin to show
Up from the town,
I will mark which must be mine,
And then start down.

—Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Isn't it lovely? Especially that first verse! We have a hill (that is almost a bit more than a hill, but that isn't quite an honest-to-goodness mountain) close by. . . . and nothing would delight me more than to sally forth, with half a hundred cousinful cousins by my side, to explore said mountain-hill these autumn days. Last week, we found us bitter-sweet berries. I am most ashamed to say so, but we "did pick one" (if the truth be told, rather more than one!) to brighten up our office, so that we can write nice cheerful letters to our many cousins.

Not so very long ago, our office boasted a beautiful black satiny vase, but one day when Ye Maker of Limericks couldn't make his limericks gal'op along properly, he sort-of shoved all his papers away, and in so doing sort-of-damaged our vase. It has never been the same since. Course we propped it up, but we daren't put any flowers in it. So our bitter-sweet is stuck here, there and everywhere—wherever we can find a nail or a nook of any kind. . .

How goes the competition? The closing date is November 26, so cousins do get busy. I wonder whether we'll have any articles on our Jewish poets or authors? Whatever you are planning to do, do it at once!

Cousin Judith.

P.S. And I'm ever so interested in the Keren Hayesod activities in your section. Tell me what's happening, will you?

THE GHETTO JEW

I marked in the midst of the glittering throng,
A figure all bent and retreating;
His raiment was shabby and bearded his face,
His gaze was bewildered and fleeting.
And they whose drossiness glared through the gilt,
Guffawed a contemptuous greeting.

Intently I peered in his time-lined face
And read there his marvellous story.
His brows were large with the wisdom of pain;
His locks by affection made hoary.
A memory lurked in the depth of his eyes,
A prayer and a vision of glory.

A mem'ry aglow with the splendours of old
A prayer of patience and yearning;
And a vision of home that gleamed in the dark,
Through ages of weary sojourning;
Yet they of the gilded and glittering throng
Had naught but derision and spurning.

He folded a dream to his quivering heart,
And nursed it through vigils of ages;
He gave it the blood of his life to absorb;
Yet mockery now is his wages!
Shall this be the word his story to close?
A jeer be the last of its pages?

—Israel Goldberg.

IN THE TENTS OF ISRAEL

The desert journey had been a weary one, and many a Hebrew who had left the land of Egypt with high courage in his heart had fallen by the wayside and perished. Now Rachel, the little daughter of Simon, lay tossing with fever while Deborah, her mother, knelt beside her as she bathed her burning face and hands from a cruse of water which stood on the ground at the sick child's head. From the camp came sounds of excited voices, but Deborah did not hear them. Nor did she turn when her husband pulled aside the curtain of black goat-skin, which divided the rude tent into two compartments, and stood beside her.

"Deborah," he said, speaking softly, for he dreaded waking the child who had fallen into an uneasy sleep, "how is the little one?"

Deborah shook her head sadly, her hands smoothing the worn-out cloak, which served the sick girl for both bed and covering when the night grew chill. "She has never been so ill since we came to Kadesh," she answered in the same hushed tones.

"Nay, she grows weaker every day." In spite of her efforts to be brave for her husband's sake, she began to sob softly, her tears falling upon the girl's washed hands. "Would we had remained in Egypt. We were slaves in the brick-yards of Pharaoh and worked from dawn until sunset beneath the whips of the taskmasters. But my little one was well and strong and could run and play with the other children. If she is taken from me now, I do not wish to enter the Land of Promise, which Moses our leader says lies just beyond the Jordan. If she die now, may I, too, perish and lie down to sleep in the desert beside her." Half unconsciously she turned to pick up a small branch lying upon the ground, and began to brush away the flies that had settled upon the child's face. "Were there no graves in Egypt," she murmured rebelliously, "that he has taken us to perish in this wilderness?"

For a moment Simon was silent. He stood looking down upon her, a very man of the desert, tall and lithe and brown, his eyes keen, his face hawk-like and thin, a warrior for the Lord suddenly fashioned from a trembling bond-slave of Egypt. Yet when he spake his voice was heavy with despair.

"Though forty days have passed, the spies have not returned," he told her hopelessly. "From every corner of the camp the people have gathered, and now they cry unto Moses our leader to deliver them from the wilderness. They, too are weary of the desert, because they fear for the frail lives of the old men and little children.' I dare not think what will happen should the spies bring back evil tidings."

The mother rose suddenly from the ground, her brooding eyes fired with a new resolve. "My child is dying," she said. "Unless help comes to her, she will surely die ere sunset. I will go before Moses, for he is a man of God, and his word will drive the fever away. Stay with the child, Simon, and I will return with him."

But her husband stood between her and the goat-skin curtain, barring her way. "Nay," he told her, "Moses is not like the magicians and star-gazers of the land of Egypt. He will use no enchantment to restore the health of our little one. Charms and incantations are evil in his eyes."

Deborah shook her head unconvinced. "Did not his word bring the plagues down upon Egypt, even the last and heaviest which slew the first born in every house, from the first-born of Pharaoh to the first-born of the slave that is behind the mills. Did not his rod cleave the waves, that we might walk between them with dry sandals? And afterwards did not his hand draw water from the rock?"

"But he wrought these miracles only for Israel—that we might be saved, that we might know the God of Abraham would redeem us from Egypt. Do not go before him— not with our little petitions, for his heart is heavy with all the woes of Israel."

"Is the life of my child a little thing?" cried Deborah. And she pushed past him, her lips firm, her eyes bright with determination. Her husband looked after her sadly. He felt that if the little one died, the mother's heart would surely break and she would be left to lie with her child beneath the desert sands.

In the midst of the camp the folk of Israel had gathered about Moses, their leader, some sullen with the despair of waiting, some shrill with frightened anger. For who knew, they asked among themselves, that Moses had not sent out his twelve strong men, leaders in their tribes, that they might perish in the strange countries on the Jordan and no longer rival him in the camp? So low had their fears brought them, that they dared to slander the man of God, even in his presence.

Deborah hastened through the rows of low, black tents which clustered on the edge of the boundless tawny desert. She gazed neither to the right nor to the left, but pressed her way through the murmuring multitude, and paused not until she had stood before Moses, the man of God. For a moment her awe choked her, and she could not speak; then the thought of the white face of her child gave her strength, and new courage filled her heart.

"My little one is sick unto death," she said, "and thou canst save her."

A man in the crowd laughed scornfully. "Be silent!" he told her. "While all Israel waits to hear whether we are destined to enter the land of refuge, is it meet to speak of thy child?"

But Moses silenced him with a look. "Would I could save thy child, poor mother," he told her gently. His stern eyes grew dreamy. "For dear to me are all weak things—little children and young lambs that have never wandered from their mothers' side. Once when I was a shepherd in Midian, I found a wee lamb that had strayed from its mother, and I carried it back to the fold in my arms, even as I have sought to carry Israel across the wilderness." He raised his voice, his eyes flashing sudden fire. "And the little lamb trusted me, and was not afraid; but Israel is without faith, and will not trust his shepherd."

"And my child?" Deborah reminded him, as the crowd murmured, shame-faced beneath his rebuke. "Canst thou save her?"

Moses did not answer. He gazed past her beyond the crowd where a group of weary-footed men struggled toward him. "They have come back," he said to himself rather than to those around him. "They have entered the Land of Promise, the land which He has given us for our own."

Keren Hayesod Mass-Meeting

The Keren Hayesod mass meeting held at the Tivoli Theatre, on Sunday, November 9, attracted an audience of more than two thousand Toronto Jews. Dr. Schmarya Levin delivered a most brilliant and thought-provoking address on the status of Jewish life to-day. "Miracles do not occur spontaneously," said Dr. Levin. "What appears to the superficial observer as a miracle generally will have taken years and years of preparation and deliberate planning. The Balfour declaration came as a result of such deliberate planning." Dr. Levin stressed the inevitability of Zionism, and pointed out the need for more rapid activity on the part of every Jew. "We should bring in 50,000 Jews into Palestine every year, for the coming ten years," said Dr. Levin.

Mr. Rothenberg of New York, chairman of the Keren Hayesod of the United States, also addressed the audience.

The meeting under the chairmanship of Mrs. A. J. Freiman, proved highly successful. Pledges amounting to the sum of $30,000 were announced at the meeting; $3,500 were raised in the hall. Mr. Pullan, chairman of the local campaign, predicted that Toronto Jewry would raise its $40,000 and more during the week.

Toronto Keren Hayesod Campaign over the Top!

The latest reports from the local Keren Hayesod headquarters indicate that more than the $40,000 objective will be raised in the city.

Keren Hayesod Banquet for Workers

One of the most impressive Zionist gatherings was held at the Zionist Institute, on Saturday, November 8, at a banquet given for all the workers of the Keren Hayesod campaign, which was inaugurated on Sunday, November 9.

Mr. Pullan, chairman of the campaign, opened the meeting, introducing Mrs. A. J. Freiman of Ottawa, president of Canadian Hadassah. Mrs. Freiman stressed the achievements of the Keren Hayesod, and the imminent need for a Jewish National Home, now that the gates to both the United States and Canada are closed to Jewish immigration.

Dr. Schmarya Levin then appeared on the platform. It was only after a lengthy applause that he was permitted to speak, greeting Canadian Jewry once again, bringing a message from Palestine. He complimented Toronto Jews upon their earnest efforts and sincere interest in the Keren Hayesod campaign. "Do not be disheartened," he said to the workers. "Be of good courage; the Jewish masses will respond to your appeal; Zionism is a reality; work earnestly, devotedly, whole-heartedly, and success is ours."

Instructions were then given to all the workers by S. J. Rodman, of Montreal, and the meeting was closed with the singing of the Hatikvah.

LONDON

The Hadassah Chapter meeting this week voted $200 as their donation to the Palestine fund, after Dr. Schmarya Levin's appeal. The Chapter also made a donation of $50 to the building fund of the new Horton Street Synagogue, and the members will raise it by means of a series of teas. The first of these will be held on Monday evening at the Synagogue, with the executive, under the direction of Mrs. M. Fishbein, president, in charge. Advance plans were considered for the annual masquerade ball, by which the Feast of Purim is marked each March. The treasurer reported the sum of $23.80 raised by contributions for dishes for the new Synagogue. This will make it possible to hold entertainments there and to serve refreshments at the regular Hadassah meetings, which will be done with a committee of four acting as hostesses on each occasion. Mrs. W. Leff was appointed convener of refreshment committees. Six new members were welcomed. A letter from one of the orphans in Palestine who are the Hadassah proteges was read.

YOUNG JUDAEANS MEET

The four local groups of Young Judeans heard a talk last night in the auditorium of the Horton Street Synagogue from S. J. Rodman, of Montreal, head of the Young Judaean movement. The groups and their guest were entertained at supper by the Herzl Girls, Hadassah Mascots and Judaean Boys' Circles in the assembly hall of the Synagogue. Mr. and Mrs. M. Fishbein and Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Goldstick were guests.

Several Young Judaean leaders met at the home of Mrs. W. Leff on Tuesday, November 4, at 6 p.m., to discuss Young Judaea work with S. J. Rodman. Concrete plans were made. Supper was served and all proceeded to hear Dr. Schmarya Levin at the mass meeting.

Mrs. Isidore Goldstick, Oxford Street, is entertaining the newly organized bridge club on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. S. C. Harris is the president, and Mrs. B. Wolfe treasurer.

Following the mass meeting at the Horton Street Synagogue, at which Dr. Schmarya Levin, of Palestine, spoke, Mr. and Mrs. Max Lerner entertained at their home in Hill Street, thirty-five friends to meet the distinguished guest.

The second meeting of the K.H. Committee of London was held at the home of the chairman, Mr. Chas. Finkelstein, in St. Thomas, on Sunday afternoon, November 9. The members of the committee and their wives travelled to St. Thomas in five automobiles. Plans were made for a canvass of London and St. Thomas. Committees: B. Lewis and L. Greisman; I. Goldstick and M. Lerner; M. Fishbein and J. Ginsberg; M. Fink and C. Finkelstein. Guests were invited to dinner by the hostess, Mrs. Finkelstein. The evening also marked the fifteenth wedding anniversary of the host and hostess, in recognition of which twenty trees were subscribed in their names by the guests present.

The will of Robert B. Hirsch, senior partner of William Openhym & Sons, 95 Madison Avenue, New York City, silk merchants, bequeaths the sum of not less than $600,000 for various educational purposes. According to the will, the Hudson Guild is to receive $25,000, Cooper Union, $20,000, the Jewish Educational Alliance, $10,000, and $10,000 each will go to the Hebrew Technical Institutes for Boys and Girls. The residuary estate will go to the Felix Adler Scholarship Endowment Fund of the Ethical Culture School, Central Park and West Sixty-third Street, New York. An equal sum in cash will be received by relatives, friends and employees of the silk firm who have been in its employ for ten years or longer. The gifts to the latter approximate ten per cent. of their yearly salaries.

At the closing of its books for the Jewish calendar year 5684, the Jewish National Fund Bureau for America had received $200,036.21 during the last twelve months in various donations from all parts of the United States. The national fund income from America for the preceding year, 5683, was $150,328.32. Thus the increase in the receipts for the past year is approximately 33 per cent.

ANNA PAVLOWA AT MASSEY HALL

Devotees of the dance and particularly the admirers of Anna Pavlowa, world's premiere danseuse, will find interest in the repertoire which she and her Ballet Russe will present at Massey Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon of this week. There will be but one ballet presented which was performed here by the Russian artist last season—the "Fairy Doll," which will be among the matinee features because of its special appeal to the younger. The complete schedule is:

Friday night: Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," the chorographic poem by Mme. Pavlowa, entitled "Autumn Leaves," and eight special numbers, or divertissements.

Saturday matinee: "Coppelia," in one act, not given by Pavlowa in this country for six years, followed by "Fairy Doll," and seven divertissements.

Saturday evening: Repetition of "Copelia," followed by "Flora's Awakening," mythological ballet, one of the famed dancer's recent revivals, followed by seven divertissements. The divertisements upon each occasion will all be changed.

SHEA'S

Frances White, diminutive musical comedy star, makes her first vaudeville appearance at Shea's next week. Frances White will be remembered as the little western girl who came to New York and took the metropolis by storm. The late William Rock brought her east. She had been there only a short time when she was a featured player with Ziegfeld Follies and the Greenwich Village Follies. Then she was seen in a musical comedy called "Jimmie," and another "The Hotel Mouse," also appearing in vaudeville from time to time. She has all the mannerisms and piquancy which vaudeville loves and her present tour has been a real triumph. Shea-goers will see her for the first time.

Alma Nielson, premiere ballerina, has a delightful routine of dances staged by Adelaide and Hughes. Dan Ely and Dave Rice assist as dancing partners and the Frivolity Five provide special music.

Cleve Caswell, who is a Toronto boy, is probably one of the best xylophonists vaudeville has. But this by no means constitutes the greatest part of his offering. He exchanges some very bright pleasantries. He is indeed versatile and was highly complimented by his Royal Highness for his mastery of the xylophone on his recent visit to England.

Leona Stephens and Len D. Hollister will be remembered by their two former vehicles, "Out in California" and "Back in Beverley Hills." This season Stephens and Hollister have deserted the California locale for the atmosphere of the New York sidewalks. Their present act, "The Passing Parade," is new and original.

"Those Were the Days" is an Irish comedy singing classic, presented by Jim McCool, Tommy Reilly and Kathleen Murray. There is comedy as well as music in the offering.

Miss Robbie Cordono in "Color Symphonies and Classics" gives ten character studies and poses in seven minutes. Her poses are most difficult, requiring not only absolute immobility of face and figure but many unusual positions. The Colleans, aero artists, and Shea's News Review complete the bill.

For November 24 the bill will be headed by Harry Carroll in his new revue, "Everything Will Be All Right."

COLUMBIA BURLESQUE

Columbia Burlesque at its very best will be presented at the Empire Theatre week of November 17, when William K. Wells offers his latest and greatest production, "Red Pepper Revue." Wells has spared neither time nor money in making this the culmination of his ambition to produce the ideal burlesque attraction. He has built a production that is reminiscent of Broadway's best and engaged a cast of major league proportions. Gowns that will make the ladies of the audience gasp in awed admiration, and girls that will make the hearts of the male contingent beat a trifle faster, supply a demand created by both phases of the public, while the comedy element is dominant. The show is in twenty-six scenes, has twenty-four chorus girls of extreme beauty, and 285 changes of costume. It is headed by Arthur Page, supported by Jack T. Edwards and Ralph Singer, Wm. E. Browning and Ed and Morton Beck. A number of interesting specialties will be offered by Ed and Morton Beck, Edwards and Singer, Ruth Rosemond, Mabel Haley and Wardell and La Coste. The lectrical effects are pronounced gorgeous and many of the scenes are unduplicated outside of a very expensive Broadway musical production. Two shows a day will be given, matinee and evening, with special appeal to women at the matinees.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York, Professor Victor Basch of the Sorbonne University, Professor Yahuda of Madrid, Professor Nahum Slousch of Jerusalem, M. Andre Spire and Israel Zangwill are members of a special committee whose task is to create fitting memorials for Max Nordau and Alexander Marmorek. This has been undertaken by the Society of Friends of Nordau and Marmorek. The first step of the committee is to arrange for the publication in Hebrew of Dr. Max Nordau's works. The committee will arrange for the publication in Hebrew of the scientific works of Dr. Alexander Marmorek on bacteriological research. The society is also considering the possibility of establishing a colony in memory of the two Jewish leaders.

Dr. Julius Ofner, at one time leader of the Austrian Liberal Party and one of the most famous jurists in Austria, died at the age of eighty. Dr. Ofner, who celebrated his eightieth birthday last month, was honoured by the Vienna Municipal Council, which conferred on him the freedom of the city of Vienna in recognition of his services. He was an observant Jew and active in the affairs of the Jewish community. For many years Dr. Ofner was a deputy in the Austrian Parliament and permanent reporter of the Austrian Constitutional Court, the highest court for questions pertaining to the constitution. He was the most authoritative commentator on the Austrian Legal Code.

A PRACTICAL LESSON IN COMBATTING PREJUDICE

By Charles D. Isaacson

George White sat at the desk next to me in the copy department of the Henry Smith Company, where we were both writing advertisements for the clients. White was a character in his way. He was a little above medium height, with a bushy growth of blond hair, which had the air of never being combed. He wore big untidy shoes and shambled along noisily, wore clothes always several sizes too large for him, all out of crease, rarely if ever visiting the tailor shop. He had a red nose and blotchy skin, a thick-lipped mouth which he opened wide and from which there would come his bellowing tones. He talked always several tones too loud, but when he became interested in anything he bellowed. The South was responsible for him, and he had been originally a typesetter, wandering to East Aurora, where Elbert Hubbard led his flock of strange humanity. White had a gift for writing, which Fra Elbertus discovered and put to use. Forever afterwards White retained the Hubbard flavor and the large-brimmed hat. He finally arrived in the big city. He was engaged by the Henry Smith Company.

I liked White and he seemed to like me. This mutual feeling may seem strange in view of what I am about to relate.

White was loudest of all when he talked about Jews and he was always doing that. He hated them. There was really no use for their existence. He would wipe them all off the face of the earth. Massacres and pogroms, revolutions and pales, were the right things for the protection of humanity against Jews. He loved to hear about Russia's persecution of her pests. "Ugh!" he would growl, "ugh! they are not nice to have around."

I think if White had said the things he did with a serious manner, I would have found a way of killing him; surely I would have had nothing to do with him. But he always had a half smile on his face, always gave me the impression that he was testing me, trying me out, teasing me. Remember I was under eighteen, he was around thirty. He was continually inviting me to go to lunch with him, but I would never let him pay for me. I wanted no favours of him. There was scarcely a noon hour when he was not at my side. Every opportunity he had he was with me, and under all his bearishness I felt intuitively something tender, something sentimental, something almost of love.

"Look ahead of us. There's a Jew," White would bellow. "I can tell them from the back. Don't even need to see their faces. I can tell them from their necks, and their walks. I've got their number.

"Look at them in this crowd, how they run Fifth Avenue. If I had my way I'd call out the reserves now and have them run off the street. Look at that man, how dirty he is. If I had my way I'd give him a bath. I'd give them all a bath. I'd fumigate the whole set of them. Ugh! they make me shudder."

I would listen to this sort of talk very angrily at first and afterwards with perfect calm.

"Why do you have anything to do with me?" I'd ask sarcastically and softly.

"Because every man must have his Jew," was White's classic retort. "Every man must have his vice, so too his Jew. Searching for a Jew you can tolerate is like trying to find a needle in a hay stack. When you find what you're looking for, you mustn't lose it. I've found you and you are necessary to my complete well-being. You are a Jew without the full quota of undesirable qualities. Maybe they are all there stunted in growth. Maybe you're a phenomenon—a Chinaman with whiskers, an Italian with blond hair—a freak. When I discuss the Jewish question I want to be able to say, "Now one of my best friends is a Jew and I like him, but he is different."

I would retort angrily: "If you think you are paying me any compliments or making me happy, you are badly mistaken. You can't defame my people and praise me. Everything you say against my people you are saying against me."

"Against you? Are those dirty cattle down in the ugly slums your people?"

"Yes," I cried, with all my heart.

"Do you want to go out there and mix with them and live down in that filth?"

"No, I don't. I—"

"You evidently put me in their class. Because I am Jewish and they are Jewish you put us in the same class?" I asked.

I have remarked before to my readers that it is my purpose to uncover all kinds of situations, pleasant and otherwise, which are part of my patch-quilt of existence. White played an immensely important role in my development. If I ever prove to be of any use to the Jewish people of America, they can thank White at least for part of it. This man brought out strangely significant ideas and determined me to make of him an example of what might be accomplished in the ending of prejudice. Surely nobody outside of the rankest participants in bloody massacres could have been more of a Jew-baiter than this man, and his ideas were so thoroughly grounded in what he thought was good sense and reason, that, youth that I was, I was more eager to convert him to tolerance than leave him in disgust. White was not a bad man, he was a good man, with his mind all out of kilter on the Jewish question.

Then patiently, systematically, enthusiastically, I schemed to put the truths before him. First of all I determined to make him like me, and respect me. For that reason I was more careful when I was with him than at any other time. He admired my growing success, he liked my way of doing things, and most of all he was astonished at my attitude on money matters.

"You're not like a Jew at all with money. You don't love it. There must be something the matter with you," White would argue. "All Jews are money mad."

I would laugh at that. Truthfully I told him that money had little if no appeal for me. Would that it had! In this respect I am too much of a despiser of coin and bill. In the course of a little while and for a few years I was to discover money an easily found commodity, which gained no love from me, no matter how it came. Something else, something finer, drew me. In all transactions which were to develop during the following years, the financial phase I brushed aside, discussions of money matters embarrassed me, and so do they still. My father was wont to take me to task for this. He did not want me to be money mad, but he wanted me to be money careful. And my wife! My wife had to watch me with the eyes of a hawk to see that nobody "put anything over," as the popular phrase has it—but they did just the same.

"Why, White, I'm surprised at you," I would argue. "The wealthiest men in America are not Jews—look at Rockefeller, Carnegie, Schwab, Armour—and so on down the list of millionaires

The majority of Jews are not well to do or even what could be termed in comfortable circumstances. All wealthy Jews are the most liberal givers to charity and those who are not well to do are charitable and saving, not because they are niggardly but because they are seeking to protect their families."

I clipped everything I could find and read and studied so that I would be prepared to reason with argument. "Those poor people on the East Side, those poor workers who crowd Fifth Avenue at luncheon hour—why do you not pity them? They have been tortured and oppressed for centuries. They are beginning to taste their first freedom. They will advance, they will learn. The second generation will be inclined to be very fresh and given to loose ways, but the third generation will be as good as any Americans. They have accents, and you don't like the accent. Then what about Italians, Germans and French—"

"That's a question of your taste. But think how you would sound in Italy, Germany or France—your accent might not seem pleasant to the rest of the world either. But that is not the point. These poor people are new here. All the unfortunate immigrants need sympathy and help. Now, listen, White. I think you are of Irish descent, aren't you? I will ask you a question like one you asked me. Are you of the class of those beer-guzzling, fighting, low-thinking creatures of the wharfs? No, of course not. Because you are a Catholic and there are some very undesirable Catholics, doesn't make all Catholics equal. I will admit there are some very unpleasant Jews, and some very illiterate and dirty Jews. They are my people. I am praying for their development. But neither you nor I are less than we are as individuals. You take the poor, illiterate Jew and you say all Jews are that way. You take the annoying Jew and you say all are that way. [illegible] say: That is a dirty man. I don't care what his religion or nationality, he is a dirty man. This is a clean man, an honourable man and it makes no difference what he is—Jewish, Catholic, German, or what not—he is fine and I like him."

So we would argue, day after day, and I marvel now at my patience and calm. I couldn't do it again, and I wouldn't. But the treatment began to work. It was a slow process, and the last thing I can remember of White was his remark: "Now I'm beginning to be sorry I'm not a Jew. Say, maybe there is some blood in me of the Jew after all."

To which I responded, that I hoped there was not, but if there was, it would lead him in the right direction.

So much for White.

He is the only one of his kind I have ever met, and I think that it was intended I should know his type, for search as I have done, I cannot find his like again. There have been instances of those who showed ignorance on Jewish matters and even slight evidences of antagonism, but never the militant, outspoken manner of White. Oftentimes I have run up against that query: "Your nationality?" to which has come my inevitable answer, "American." "No, no, what are your people?"—and my response, "My father was born here, but my mother and our grandparents and great-grandparents were English." "You do not understand. I mean, are you Jewish?" "Am I Jewish? Yes, of course I am." The inquirer becomes annoyed. "Why didn't you say you were Jewish at first?" "My dear sir," comes my answer, "I could not say that at first because I am an American. If you wish to know whether I am Jewish you may ask it in that way or you may ask for my religion. You are confusing religion and nationality, my dear sir. A man is a Catholic and a Frenchman, a German and a Protestant, an American Frenchman, German, Italian and is a Jew. Jews are spread over the face of the earth and they are as good patriots [illegible] religion." Sometimes the gentleman is not quite satisfied. If he knows a little history he tells me that there was a Jewish nation, or he points out that there are physical characteristics and mannerisms which mark the Jew from all other people and this does not apply to Catholics or Protestants. Sometimes he says that Jews are clannish; they always live together, banded so close that they may fight and protect themselves and be close to their own people.

I remember one time being in the company of some acquaintances when this story was told:

"My sister had her first vote. She had to choose the alderman, and she saw two names—one was like Alexander and the other like Cohen. She wouldn't vote for a Jew because she dislikes them, so she voted for the other, and when he was elected she heard he was coloured, and she hates them!"

In the trains I have often overheard some petty discussions on the Jewish question, sometimes and generally by those utterly beneath notice, but I have boiled over and could not restrain my tongue. Once or twice the argument developed into a fist fight. At other times, I have been the recipient of gratuitous information by garrulous men and when it came around to the subject of Jewish matters, I have listened and generally retorted, "As a Jew I wonder why you are telling me this." A very amusing episode happened quite recently when I was riding in the subway. I overheard this conversation in the side seats ahead of me:

"Yeh, I go to the Mail concerts, but it's a shame there's a Jew running it."

"I say so, too. Isaacson isn't bad in his way. He's pretty funny and all that—but he's a Jew."

I arose from my seat, and pretending I had heard nothing stood right where they could see me.

"Still Jewish," I answered.

railway to discover an American sailor at the landing, pulling the whiskers of an old patriarch, and saying, "Nice Jew, nice Jew." I had an umbrella in my hand and I beat it over the sailor's head saying, "Nice sailor, nice American you are—" and without a word, he started on the run, as fast as his legs would carry him.

Somewhat similar to White's attitude is that of many I have met who attempt to patronize me. It is too bad I am Jewish—I am really too nice. With these people I never mince words. Nor do I attempt to be subtle, polite or restrained in my retorts. I am not like I used to be with White. But I do always try to leave the ignorant and unlearned with a little better understanding of matters Jewish. Chiefly I want them always to know how proud I am of the blood in me, of the ancestry which had struggled so hard. I am oratorical when I get into that kind of a situation and I recite the poetry of the Jew and his grand history.

Twenty thousand dollars has been appropriated by the Independent Order Bnai Brith for the establishment of a branch office in Mexico City for the purpose of carrying on relief work among the Jewish immigrants in that city. The Independent Order Bnai Brith has been one of the first American Jewish organizations to interest itself in the situation in Mexico and the possibility which that county may afford for Jewish immigration.
